On 'The Day After'

By TODD NASH

"The world's got a bomb we could all die any day, is a line from Prince's song "1999." It also was the much-feared reality in Sunday's ABC Theater Presentation of The Day After.

The students of the high school were all looking forward to this movie about the days before and after the nuclear holocaust, a subject that sets off fear in most of our hearts.

At our age, we at the high school understand enough about the so called, "Bomb," to take sides on it and we are divided. Some feel it is a necessary evil for the protection of our country, others think that nuclear defense weapons should be dropped from our defense program, and the feelings go on.

These are not the feelings of the children but of the adults of tomorrow, the ones who'll decide more than likely, what will come of this issue.

The point of The Day After was to graphically show the effects of a nuclear attack and to send the U.S. and U.S.S.R. a message about their use of nuclear arms. Though the effects shown were not as tragic as after a real nuclear attack according to top officials.

The one question pressing on each of our minds now is, "Will this ever happen to us?"

At FBLA meeting

Club hears Anderson

The high school Future Business Leaders of America held its monthly meeting on Nov. 2.

After inspiring devotions by our chaplain, Janet Baker, the chapter heard from Senator Howard Anderson. Senator Anderson is a member of the State Senate and representative of the eighteenth senatorial district.

Sen. Anderson was a member of the House during 1958-71 and a member of the Senate since 1972.

He spoke on the importance of having a balanced budget in the Federal Government and what is being done to have Congress act upon it.

Sen. Anderson then answered questions from the club members.

President Scott Drinkard reported that FBLA members sold $8489.70 in their fund-raising project. Judy Christian was the highest salesperson selling $345.50 worth of items.

Royal wins contest

By PAIGE JONES

At the beginning of this school year, the high school Forensics Club sponsored a school-wide spelling bee.

Every English class had individual spelling contests to determine class winners. In all, there were 34 class winners who went on to compete for grade winners. The four grade participants on October 21 had the final round which determined the school winner. The next day, Tiffany Royal, a sophomore, was announced the school winner.

Miss Royal's favorite subjects are U. S. History and not surprisingly, literature. She likes to read and credits her spelling ability to the fact that she is an avid reader. Her favorite books are romantic mysteries, autobiographies and biographies.

When she is not reading, Tiffany is either cooking or working on one of her many collections.

Beside collecting the usual things like minatures, bottles, and magazines, she also collects cartoon strips and models of cartoon figures.

Miss Royal's future plans include finishing high school and hopefully going to U.N.C. There Miss Royal wants to attain a degree in law.

Local district slates new educational program

A new conservation education program called Conservation Olympics is being developed by the Robert E. Lee Soil and Water Conservation Districts (RELee CD).

This contest, to be held in the spring, will include land judging, forestry, and plant identification. Conservation Olympics will be open to junior and senior groups from existing orgranized clubs, such as Science Club, FFA, 4-H Club, etc. A team would be comprised of 3 or 4 young people representing a particular club. Junior teams include those through age 13 and senior teams age 14 through grade 12. Conservation Education Committee Chairman, Frank Sweet, reported that about six youth clubs are planning to compete this spring.

Other activities at the November RELee CD meeting included plans for the Awards Banquet in January. Stauffer Chemical Company will present their "Stewards of the Soil" program.

Also, the RE Lee CD plans to team up with the County Farm Bureaus to help them promote their Conservation Tillage Contest. There will be two categories - one for the established no-till farmers and another for the first-time no-till farmers. More information on this contest will come later.

John Swift, Amherst County Forester, Virginia Division of Forestry (VDF) told the Conservation District Directors that VDF is now assisting landowners manage their timberlands to include firewood. He reported that 2 million cords of firewood a year are burned in Virginia. By including firewood management a lot of wood that would otherwise be wasted is now being utilized. "Some landowners are ruining their timber by cutting the wrong trees," the forester said. "They are cutting the straight ones that split the easiest and leaving the sorry ones."

Bob McClenny with the USDA Soil Conservation Service reported that he had inspected the streambank stabilization work along the Staunton River below the Leesville Dam. This project was sponsored by the RE Lee CD and carried out by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. McClenny reported that the work done on the streambank was in good condition.
